Behind policy debate about welfare reform, AIDS funding and hate crime laws are people — people struggling with poverty, illness and discrimination. Illuminating the often-neglected human side of society’s pressing problems, Social Issues Firsthand is a must-have series that broadens and balances readers’ exposure to current social issues, such as homosexuality, poverty and hate crimes. Each anthology in the series presents a diverse collection of personal narratives written by individuals with first-hand experience in the topic being discussed, either as a participant, a witness or an involved professional. Terrorism, for example, includes the perspectives of terrorists, victims, families of victims and emergency workers.

Providing a personal context for the most pressing topics of today’s political discussions, each volume in Social Issues Firsthand features a/an:

- Introduction grounding each book in essential context
- List of organizations to contact
- Thorough bibliography guiding further research
- Annotated table of contents
- Thoughtful index enabling quick access to target information
- And more

Adoption

In this anthology, birth parents, adoptive parents and adopted children discuss the challenges and the rewards of adoption. The personal narratives address such topics as the amount of contact between children and birth parents, the blending of interracial families and the arduous decision to give up a child to adoption.

Homosexuality

Gays and lesbians are a marginalized segment of American society, and homophobia and violence remain real threats to those who live an openly gay lifestyle. Personally affected by this reality, contributors to this anthology discuss coming to terms with their own identity as a homosexual in a primarily heterosexual world.
