Contents

Introduction ..................................................... xi

Nathan Aaseng .................................................... 1
Prolific, award-winning author of nonfiction series for children and young adults, many of which deal with sports.

Scott Adams ......................................................... 11
Creator of the wildly popular Dilbert comic strip which mocks contemporary corporate America.

Lloyd Alexander ............................................... 17
Notable fantasy writer, best known for works including the Newbery Award-winning The High King and The Black Cauldron, a Newbery Honor Book.

James Cameron ................................................. 27
Director and screenwriter of movies such as Aliens and The Terminator who made film history with the record-breaking box office hit Titanic, which received eleven Academy Awards.

Aidan Chambers ................................................ 43
British author of powerful, challenging young adult novels such as Dance on My Grave and The Toll Bridge.

Daniel Defoe ....................................................... 49
Considered the father of the novel and of modern journalism, this prolific eighteenth-century British writer is generally associated with his famed adventure story Robinson Crusoe.

Loren D. Estleman ............................................. 63
Also an author of Westerns, this writer is best known for his “Amos Walker” detective mysteries that realistically depict inner-city Detroit.

Terry Goodkind .................................................. 73
Author of the bestselling series of traditional fantasy quest tales, the “Sword of Truth.”

Karen Hesse ...................................................... 79
The Newbery Award winning Out of the Dust, which deals with the Oklahoma dust bowl, is among this writer’s contemporary and historical novels focusing on place.

Julie Johnston ................................................... 87
Young people’s feelings for others are at the heart of Canadian author’s Hero of Lesser Causes and Adam and Eve and Pinch-Me, both of which received the prestigious Governor General’s Literary Award.

Annette Curtis Klause ..................................... 93
In The Silver Kiss and Blood and Chocolate, this novelist approaches societal difference by creating sympathetic young vampires and werewolves who have positive interactions with humans.

Susan Kuklin .................................................. 101
In nonfiction works like After a Suicide and Irrepressible Spirit, this photojournalist addresses controversial topics of concern to teenagers.

Marie G. Lee ................................................... 111
Asian American author whose protagonists struggle with being different in such coming-of-age novels as Finding My Voice.

Ursula K. Le Guin ............................................. 119
Acclaimed science fiction and fantasy writer whose works, such as the “Earthsea Quartet,” explore issues of power, identity, and relationships.
Sharyn McCrumb ................................................. 135
Edgar Award-winning crime fiction novelist whose mysteries, like She Walks These Hills and Lovely in Her Bones, take place in intricate, unique settings and situations.

James A. Michener .............................................. 141
This Pulitzer Prize winner’s novels, including
Space and Texas, often approaching the people, places, and events of our time from a historical perspective, have made him an American institution.

Lensey Namioka ............................................... 153
Young adult writer whose humorous and adventurous stories, including White Serpent Castle and Yang the Youngest and His Terrible Ear, are informed by her own Chinese heritage and her husband’s Japanese background.

Larry Niven ..................................................... 159
This five-time Hugo Award recipient penned Ringworld, an acclaimed science fiction novel about a hoop-shaped planet and its inhabitants.

Garth Nix ......................................................... 167 Australian author whose fiction, including The Ragwitch and Sabriel, centers on children who must undergo difficult challenges to save lives and restore order.

Naomi Shihab Nye ........................................... 175
Editor, novelist, and poet who has received numerous honors for her poetry, fiction, and anthologies aimed at building bridges between people.

Trey Parker and Matt Stone ..................................... 185
Creators of the controversial but highly-rated animated television show South Park, featuring the adventures of four foul-mouthed youngsters in small-town Colorado.

Erich Maria Remarque ...................................... 193
German-born author of the time-honored war novel, All Quiet on the Western Front.

Shelley Stoehr .................................................. 203
In such works as Crosses and Weird on the Outside, this fiction writer speaks in honest terms about teen problems and situations that are not often explored in literature.

Margaret Willey ............................................... 209
This author presents characters grappling with the challenges of young adulthood in novels like
The Melinda Zone and Facing the Music.

Acknowledgments .............................................. 217

Author/Artist Index .......................................... 223